Minutes could not be located for prior meeting, and will be sent out in the near future for approval.

Announcements:

The State Plan is up on the State Library's website:
<http://www.lib.az.us/is/feddocs/stateplan.aspx>.

Dan Stanton discussed the upcoming AzLA Conference. The Planning Group has a wiki (azla.conference.wikispaces.com). Voting will be activated for proposed programs. The deadline for poster sessions is May 20, 2011. The conference will be held at La Paloma in Tucson from November 28 to November 30, 2011.

Janet discussed the National Legal Inventory Project. This project finds primary legal materials online with the goal to create permanent public access to the documents. It started at the national level and now states are working on state and local level documents. David Gay described an upcoming effort to include Native American Laws in the National Legal Inventory in the fall. He will be working on that part.

Old Business:

There was discussion of the duties of the Education Committee. The purpose is to identify needs for any training or tours at AzDLC semi-annual meetings and to help work through planning for Biennial Meetings. Scott Snellman, CAC, will participate in this committee. Others interested should contact Janet.

Work is continuing on WebJunction's Gi21 pages. WebJunction will be changing their template platform. Classes will be made available to everyone and there will be new content management (2012). It is not totally clear how the changes will affect in the coming months. Janet is in touch with our WebJunction contact to guide us through the changes. The Council was satisfied with how Gi21 appears currently.

The Six-State Depository Conference 2012 could be held in the Spring since GPO will only be holding one Depository Library Council meeting in the fall (Federal Depository Conference). The Arizona Council generally preferred to hold the Six-State Conference in August because of school schedules. Janet discussed a new idea to do the virtual conference as it was done last year, but have one live break-out session in various locations. Mollie Gugler, Camille O'Neill, Barbara Howe and Janet Fisher all discussed what it was like to plan and execute last year's conference virtually. The feeling was generally favorable to continue with a virtual model for 2012.

Planning for next year's Six-State Conference was discussed. Dan and Camille expressed interest in helping with planning and implementation. Barbara expressed interest in helping with surveys. Last year's format (5 days with 1-hour sessions and lunch-and-learns) was favored. Janet will coordinate with Peggy in Colorado and report.

Dan Stanton gave an update on the Depository Library Council Meeting in San Antonio. There is a new Public Printer (Bill Boarman) and new Superintendent of Documents (Mary Alice Baish). The Ithaca Report was not discussed which proposes a new model for the depository library system. In June, FDLP Desktop will be re-launched. The PACER system was discussed regarding upcoming free access for federal depositories after June. The first phase of Ben's Guide redesign will launch in the Fall of 2011. GPO has launched an enhanced version of the Registry of Digitization Projects.

Andy Bourgeois, a student at University of Maryland Library School program (E-Government cohort) gave a summary of his program. It focuses on government information online and includes an internship.

Depository Library Updates:

Allan Dew, Pima County Public Library, reported on weeding and conforming catalog.

Atifa Rawan, University of Arizona, discussed her library's involvement in the Greater Western Library Alliance (GWLA) and she is also the new Government Document Group representative. Her library is hiring.

Camille O'Neill, Arizona Western College, reported that the college is in the process of selecting a new Vice President for Academic and Student Services. The library recently successfully complete its 18-month long Program Review. AWC is also part of the GPO pilot to push catalog records to their online catalog. The government documents collection inventory is continuing.

Deb Holbrook, Northland Pioneer College, is new in her position and so is learning about government documents.

Janet Fisher, State Library, reported that the Mesa Public Library is dropping its designation. Please send your wish lists of items to Janet, so that you can fill gaps in your collections or receive materials that Mesa no longer wants. The State Library has some new faces to government documents: Efreem Sepulveda and Barbara Howe. They are learning about the depths and processes relating to the federal depository collection.

Mollie Gugler talked about her library reducing hours and not having computers in library classroom. However, the new President approved the proposal to put RFID tags on their library collection.

Pat Headlee, Northern Arizona University, discussed that NAU is updating their catalog with the addition of records on old items and eBooks collection.

David Gay said that Ross Blakley Law Library is shortening its reference hours to 10am – 3pm, starting May 31 through Aug 19.

A general thanks was given to Janet for all her continued leadership while she's getting more roles (as Acting State Librarian, etc.).
